1. What CREST is

CREST is practical creative media education for adults. Make a short DJ mix, record a podcast, plan a livestream or put together a simple video with guidance from Brian Burns.

2. Modern media literacy

Check where material comes from, see how editing affects what an audience understands, and make choices about consent, privacy, attribution and what to share.

3. What to bring

Brian supplies the core demonstration equipment. A laptop or headphones can help, depending on the activity. Ask what is useful for your session when you enquire.

Plan your session

4. What you can make

DJ-ing and music: select tracks, practise transitions and build a short mix.
Recording and podcasting: record a voice or interview and make a first edit.
Broadcasting and video: plan a stream or short clip, try audio and video tools and review what is ready to share.
Events and live sound: follow the path from microphone to speaker and practise a simple setup.

5. Choose a format

In a group class, seven learner places give people time to try the equipment and share ideas. The class runs for one hour and costs €40 per learner. In-person one-to-one tuition costs €50 per session and gives you time to focus on your own project or questions.

6. Ask about a place

Tell Brian what you would like to make, which format suits you and when you are available. Confirm the date, venue and what to bring before booking. Visit CREST learner enquiries or message @burnsey_bonestorm.
